Not illustrated. 1917 edition. Excerpt: ... which 2y2 miles farther north rise to heights of 70 and 100 feet. Seal Rocks, abreast the highest part of the bluffs, are low and extend parallel to the coast for 2y2 miles at a distance of y2 mile from the beach. The highest rock rises 20 feet above water. Beyond Seal Rocks the bluffs are low with a broad sand beach until within iy2 miles of Yaquina Bay, where sand dunes begin and continue to its entrance. The land behind is comparatively low and wooded, with areas of burnt timber. An area of sunken rocks is reported to exist from 2 to 4 miles northwestward from Seal Rocks, and about iy2 miles offshore. Marys Peak, a prominent mountain 4,097 feet high, lies 24 miles eastward from the entrance to Yaquina Bay. Its sides are wooded, but its summit is covered with grass. Yaquina Bay is descriced under a separate heading on page 156. From Yaquina Bay to Yaquina Head, Sy2 miles, the coast consists of broken, yellow cliffs bordered on the southern part by broad, lowwater, sand beaches. Yaquina Head, 3'2y2 miles northward of Heceta Head, is distinguished by two conical hills covered with grass. The outer one is 360 feet high and the inner 407 feet high, with a low saddle, 200 feet high, between them. The extremity of the point, which projects about 1 mile from the general trend of the coast, is broken and rocky, but comparatively low. One mile inland from the point the grass-covered land changes to a dense forest and the hills rise rapidly. Two sunken ledges lie northward from the point, not over 2 mile from the beach. Yaquina Head lighthouse is a white conical tower situated on the flat bench projecting at the western extremity of the head. The light is fixed white, 162 feet above the water, and visible 19 miles. From Yaquina Head to Cape... College Ruled Color Paperback. Size: 6 inches x 9 inches. 55 sheets (110 pages for writing). California Coast Line. 157838804779 Baja California: wild, desolate, and a treasure-house of geological wonders. Along its ancient shorelines, careful observers can learn much about how the Gulf of California came into existence and what the future of the Baja California peninsula might be. For those who wish to unlock the mysteries of Baja California, geologist Markes Johnson offers the key. He has taken a body of technical research on the geology and paleontology of the region and made it accessible in plain language for anyone who visits the peninsula, whether for study or recreation. His book teaches general concepts in coastal geomorphology and tectonics, as well as the basic geological and natural history of the Gulf of California, in a conversive, intellectually stimulating fashion. Johnson's guide takes the form of six day-long hikes in the area of Punta Chivato on the east coast of the southern Baja California peninsula. Punta Chivato is presented as a microcosm of the entire region; it can enable visitors to better understand major themes in the natural history of the Gulf of California and its geological past. All of the hikes begin at the southeast corner of the Punta Chivato promontory and loop out in different directions. Each circuit is designed to minimize overlap with adjacent hikes and to maximize the visitor's exposure to instructive variations in the landscape. Each chapter features additional reflections on a geologist of another time and place who has advanced the field in a way that elucidates the material covered in that chapter. Through these asides, readers will learn the basic lessons about how geologists read the secrets hidden in landscapes. Discovering the Geology of Baja California invites visitors to these shores to explore not only rocks and fossils but also the continuum of past ecosystems with the ecology of the present. It offers both an unparalleled guide to a remote area and a new understanding of life caught in an endless cycle of change. First published in 1987.
