Compound Nouns Dec 11 2021 This book was mainly designed to help teachers and students of Arabic with the following areas:Items of vocabularySimple structures (word relation)Fluency & FluencyQuizzes for extra activitiesThe book introduces more than 200 compound nouns, that is more than 400 items of vocabulary. These items represent everyday objects and expressions. A- Multiple choice questions of 4 compound nouns and an image. The students choose the right noun depending on the image. At this stage, it is recommended that teachers help the students check the first few correct answers. In the next pages, it is the students who should figure out the right answers. The quizzes are designed in a way that most words are repeated as one correct answer and three distractors. The distractors are distributed in a way that the students will learn them before they become the correct answer they should choose.B- The previous Multiple choice questions are reintroduced with a slight variation. The first component is provided and the students have to choose the second component depending on the image provided. The order of the questions is not the same as the order of the previous ones to make this section more challenging. This section of the book is designed to enhance spelling by asking the student to write the word required.C- In this section of the book, the exercises are more challenging and involve more writing. Each set includes six nouns for the students to combine and make three compound nouns to match the three images provided. Then, the students write the nouns they make. D- In this section, simple crossword puzzles are provided to cover all the compound nouns learned. The students look at the relevant image and write the missing component of the compound noun in the blank. Then they break it down into letters to complete the grid according to the given numbers. In this activity, the student has to depend solely on their memory to the missing components as no options provided except an image. The two main cases of noun relations: Idafa and Nisbah are fully explained. It is recommended that teachers/students start with the first section of the book before they move on to the exercise sections. After they have had an idea about how compound nouns are made, the students will find the exercises easy and fun to do. Teachers can expand the exercises by asking students to decide, for instance, whether the given compound noun is made by means of nisbah or idafa. Or they can ask the students to say what relation is linking the two nouns. Learning these compound nouns will enhance the student's memory and thus their fluency. They will learn how to say two words together as one. This skill will take their fluency to a whole new level at ease while they are learning new items of vocabulary and doing the exercises through which the previously introduced nouns reoccur frequently. For accuracy, compound nouns are more specific than common nouns. Not only does learning these 200 compound nouns enrich the student's vocabulary but also it brushes up their accuracy. The book layout is formatted and designed to serve as photocopiable worksheets that can be used separately or individually. Teachers can use these worksheets as a complementary activity in the beginning or end of lessons. They can also be used for homework and revision. They can also be for group and individual activities. However, these worksheets are not to be used for commercial purposes as they are copyrighted. Autodidacts can use the book as an entertainment book to do the quizzes at their free time to enrich their vocabulary or refresh their memories.
