Dear B Oct 21 2022 The transition from your local elementary school, to a large, potentially alienating secondary school can be a difficult adjustment. It can be very scary, but all freshmen are in the same place--they all want to fit in and make friends. High School is the start of an incredible journey that will ultimately be the origin of great memories. As scary as the start of the school year may seem to you right now, I have confidence that impression will blow over and you will question what all the bother was about. Dear B, How to Survive and Thrive in High School is written by educator Chris Spence and his soon to be high school teen Briana and provides advice and a game plan for high school success. Students prepare for and deal with the high school experience in many different ways. It truly is a unique experience, and I believe it is important for parents to play a large role in preparing their teen(s) for high school. In high school, teens begin to experience a great deal of newfound freedom. Talk with your teen ahead of time about their initial high school impressions. Are they nervous, excited and or uneasy about the transition? Talk with them when they come home, before they go to bed and whenever else they are willing to talk. Ask lots of questions about their teachers, their classes and their general thoughts about the high school experience. As educators our work is teaching and learning-to prepare children for lives as successful, productive, contributing adults. Our job is to set high standards for all children-to help them overcome any barriers that stand in the way of learning and learning well. But we can't ignore the facts of children's lives. All children are unique and have distinct vantage points, learning in various ways and at different rates. Some need structure and some need a mix; but all need respect for the individual they are, and who they want to grow to be. Believe in their abilities, and partner with other adults to design experiences conducive to bringing out their individual greatness.

"This terrifying book reads like a horror movie. No, wait. It has the suspense and shocks and screams of TEN horror movies in one. Great nasty fun!" —R.L. Stine, author of Goosebumps and Fear Street Alice Lawrence is the sole witness in her sister's murder trial. And in the year since Claire's death, Alice's life has completely fallen apart. Her parents have gotten divorced, she's moved into an apartment that smells like bologna, and she is being forced to face her sister's killer and a courtroom full of people who doubt what she saw in the corn maze a year prior. Claire was an all-American girl, beautiful and bubbly, and a theater star. Alice was a nerd who dreamed of becoming a forensic pathologist and would rather stay at home to watch her favorite horror movies than party. Despite their differences, they were bonded by sisterhood and were each other's best friends. Until Claire was taken away from her. On the first day of the murder trial, as Alice prepares to give her testimony, she is knocked out by a Sidney Prescott look-alike in the courthouse bathroom. When she wakes up, it is Halloween night a year earlier, the same day Claire was murdered. Alice has until midnight to save her sister and find the real killer before he claims another victim.
